Upon a request of Mr. L. M. Saunders the minutes of the preceding meetings were read.

Mr. S. S. Baker raised a question that the Jamendment to the by-laws, changing the hours of voting not having been adopted by a yea and nay vote, according to the minutes, was illegally adopted. JUDGE HAGNER'S COURT.

What He Had to Say to the Grand Jurers Justice Hagner entered the Criminal Court 1879-SPRING MILLINERY-1879 chamber yesterday morning promptly at ten o'clock. The court was immediately con vened and he proceeded at once to business In calling the roll it was found that nearly all of the grand and petit jurors drawn for the term were present. Of the grand jury the following were excused: Mesers, William Lenkins and H. D. Cooke, jr. (on doctor's certificates), John H. Burrett and Emmet Burrett government employees.) The Marshal was The Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company was held at Old Fellows' Hall last evening, and an exciting session was held. About 200 policy holders were present. It was apparent from the outset that the Reformers," or policy holders opposed to the present management, were largely in the majority. Major A. C. Richards presided, and Mr. Jamos S. Edwards acted as secretary.

His Honor briefly addressed them, and said that he thanked them for their attendance, which showed that they appreciated the importance of the service which they had been called into. He thought there was nothing more important than the duties of a grand jury. On what they should do depended the peace and good order of the community. Laxity of labor always encouraged the dangerous classes—those living within the atmosphere of crims—to become emboldened and prosecute their depredations; but when they know that prompt and summary punishment would ensue it checked crime, for it stands in fear of the responsibility that its deeds entail. He further continued, then, as to the importance of keeping secret the doings of the grand jury room and preserving their oath inviolate. The grand jury then retired to their room. Mesers. Thomas Knowles, Charles Jones, and Charles E. Magruder, of the petit jury, were excused and two drawn from the box failed to answer.
